DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-16, 19 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Durr 5,644,846.

Durr discloses a reciprocating stroke drive mechanism comprising claimed elements that include: an eccentric transmission, having an imbalance compensation element (13); an eccentric element (at 9); an armature shaft (11); and a drive shaft (5), wherein the eccentric element is rotatably and fixedly mounted on the armature shaft and rotates with the armature shaft and converts, due to its own rotation during an operation mode, a revolving rotary motion of the armature shaft in an oscillating rotary motion of the drive shaft (5) in order to drive an insertion tool (2) of a hand-held power tool (Fig. 1) to oscillate, wherein the imbalance compensation element (13) is integral to another functional unit (20); the motor is inherently electric; and the eccentric element and the armature shaft rotate about the same axis. Durr does not specifically disclose the armature recess receiving the armature shaft or the imbalance compensation element being a one-piece part of another functional element. However Durr's apparatus contains elements that are equivalent to those claimed. Therefore configuring Durr's elements to obtain predicted results may be obtained through routine experimentation.

Art Unit: 3723

Furthermore, making the imbalance compensation element as a one-piece part of another element is a matter of obvious design choice since forming in one piece an article which has formerly been formed in two pieces and put together involves only routine skill in the art.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-16, 19 and 20 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
